F. E. REPUBLIC RECOGNITION URGED AT BIG N. Y. MEETING

Foreign Policy Association Hears Discussion

ENVOY, SPEAKER

Four Hundred Guests Attend—Plan Pressure

Dalta News Agency

Washington, March 7.—The Foreign Policy Association of America organised a banquet on March 4 at the Hotel Astor in New York at which the discussion was devoted to the Far Eastern Republic. Over four hundred members and guests were present among whom were some prominent public men, journalists, lawyers, bankers and business men.

The speakers were Mr. Charles Smith, U. S. representative of the inter-allied railroad committee in Siberia; Mr. B. E. Skvirsky, Chairman of the Far Eastern Republic's mission to the United States; Mr. Moore, in charge of the Japanese Government's foreign publicity department; Professor John Dewey; Mr. Baldwin, representative of an American agricultural association; Mr. Thorne, representative of an electrical company, and Mr. Green, of the Rockefeller institute.

All the speakers except Moore urged the recognition of the Far Eastern Republic and the withdrawal of the Japanese troops from Siberia. Mr. Skvirsky's speech received long applause.

The Japanese journalist, Mr. Yenaga, who was present, also favored the withdrawal of the Japanese troops from Siberia. The chairman of the banquet, Mr. MacDonald, urged that all should urge the American government to recognise the Far Eastern Republic and should bring all possible medium of pressure on the state department.

JOHANNESBURG AN ARMED CAMP, STRIKERS VIOLENT

9,000 Engineers And 8,500 Building Men Out

(Reuter's Service)

Johannesburg, March 8.—So far the general strike declaration has locally affected the larger unions. Nine thousand engineers and 8,500 builders have struck.

There is a distinctly ugly spirit developing. Commandos, numbering sometimes 200, are marching into works and factories and compelling the cessation of work. Huge crowds yesterday surrounded and entered the post office, which suspended operations for an hour until the police cleared the building.

Disturbances also occurred at the telephone exchange and the fire station. The police fired blank shots. One striker was wounded by a bayonet.

There were several other collisions with the police, notably at Brandis Square, where the strikers fired revolvers. The police charged with bayonets, supported by an aeroplane and armored cars. Fighting has also occurred round a colored church in the suburb of Brixton.

Capetown, March 8.—Speaking in the Assembly yesterday, General Smuts described the situation as somewhat worse. He deplored the tone of the Chamber of Mines' reply to the Industrial Federation and criticised the latter for dropping the ballot proposal, whereby he had hoped that a settlement would be effected.

Coalition Unionists Win Bye Election

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 8.—The bye election in the West Division of Wolverhampton consequent on the death of Sir Alfred Bird on February 7, has resulted in the return of Sir Robert Bird, Coalition Unionist, with 16,790 votes. Mr. A. G. Walkden, the Labor Candidate, received 13,799 votes.

At the General Election in December 1918, Sir Alfred Bird (Co-Unionist Candidate) received 13,329 votes and Mr. Walkden 10,158.

Joffre--The Grand Old Poilu

By

Captain Bruce Hopper

(This editorial is reprinted from yesterday's EVENING STAR. Captain Hopper, now a member of the STAR staff, served throughout the Great War, first with the French and later in the American aviation corps. Another Joffre editorial by the same writer will appear in tonight's Evening Star.

TODAY WE WELCOME to Shanghai the great Joffre, Mareschal de France, foremost soldier of the world, and noblest poilu of them all.

The grand old poilu will find many warm soldier hearts in Shanghai. His coming awakens a memory of fighting days. Many are here who were with him in that long, weary retreat, when France was driven to bay. Many, too, are here who were with him in the glory of the Marne. And there are many others here who wanted to be with him then, who arrived late on the scene of combat, but not too late.

To all these left to carry on after the great fight, the coming of Papa Joffre is a reminder of the tie that binds the people of the Allied nations. Our dead were lost in a common cause, against a common enemy. There must be no dissension now, nor discord in the Allied ranks. The governments may bicker over methods of winning the peace, but the Allied peoples are united in the common bond of their dead.

Fully to appreciate the genius of Joffre, and estimate his niche in the hall of immortal names, we must travel back in spirit to those days of anxious uncertainty. August and September, 1914.

A cloud came over the universe. Thinking people were stunned by the lightning rapidity of events which seemed cataclysmic. There was confusion, and darkness. But out of it all France emerged triumphant, glorious, supreme in arms as she has always been in courage.

What happened? Our precious heritage of human liberalism hung by a thread. That thread was the swaying line of red kepis which stretched from Verdun in a semi-circle to the gates of Paris. Throughout the heat and dust of the retreat the thread was flexible. Transport was inadequate, and disrupted. But somehow the thread retained its continuity. Suddenly it tightened. The Boche was meshed in the trap. And Paris did not fall after all, nor did the world receive the full impress of the Prussian heel.

It is rare that fate delivers into the hands of a single man the manifest destiny of a civilisation. But if that phenomenon ever occurred it did on the Marne, September 6-10, 1914. That is what we owe to Joffre. That is why his name shall never die.

THE wonder of the Marne victory grows as the years separate us from the actual sound of the guns. We cannot forget the sight of the German Juggernaut, the nearest invincible war machine ever put into motion. Westward and southward it came, an invasion of motor cars and shining boots. First came the Uhlan scouts, with their sleek horses, spiked helmets, and hollow lances. Then the solid masses of greenish-grey infantry, complete to the latest patent in buckles.

"Nach Paris" was the cry of the machine. It crashed through Belgium, breaking treaties as easily as it did champagne bottles. The "nach Paris" program permitted no standing upon rights of neutrals. The railroads had been built to the frontiers for this very emergency of invading France. Belgium was not even expected to dispute the passage of the machine. It was to be all over before Britain could act. The French left wing would be doubled back on the right like the closing of a jack-knife. There would be another Sedan, another Bismarck at Versailles, and then the business of destroying the Russian army at leisure.

Thus the "nach Paris" program. It worked like a clock until almost at the goal. The Uhlans were within shooting distance of the Paris cafes, so attractive to the German military mind.

Then something happened.

LET us remember that scene. It was one of the most dramatic in all history. The big encircling swing of the German right wing, under von Kluck, the crushing of Belgium, the brushing aside of the "Contemptibles" by mere superior weight, and the retreat of the French.....all showed the charge "nach Paris" was going well.

In the excitement the French government evacuated Paris for Bordeaux. General Gallieni prepared the city for a siege, throwing up barbed wire, and digging trenches. The Bois de Boulogne became a huge pasturage for cattle. Paris remembered with horror the famine of 1870, and was preparing for another larger siege. And every afternoon the Taubes with the Black Crosses on the wings flew over the city, dropping messages of lies about Russia.

In those days of fleeing governments and retreating armies the Parisians found one ray of hope. Pictures of General Joffre were displayed. In that face was something to inspire enthusiastic confidence. The saying became current: "Papa Joffre will get them yet, just wait."

And he did.

Meanwhile the omnibuses which had carried Parisians from the Madeleine to the Bastille, and from Port Maillot to La Cite were to be seen along the roads to the east. Taxis were marshalled by the hundred to carry the reserves to the entrenchd positions south of the Marne, where Joffre had decided to turn the tide.

THE trap was set, like a blind sack, into which the Boche rushed, crying "nach Paris." On September 6 came Joffre's famous order of the day, commanding France to stand and die, but retreat no further. After that all was forward, and northward. In the recoil the boasted war machine was flung clear back to the Aisne, to dig itself in like an exhausted monster. When Joffre struck, his blow was as swift and unerring as divine vengeance. Paris, and France, and the democratic world were saved by the brilliance of that stroke.

We must not forget this in welcoming the great Joffre to Shanghai. When the S. V. C. salutes the marshal it will be Shanghai's share in the universal honor to one of the great captains of history.

And Shanghai, the city of many nations, eagerly accepts the invitation of M. Wilden, consul-general and another soldier for France, to greet the distinguished soldier. For Joffre, of all men has earned a gratitude which is truly international. He is the grand old poilu, to whom all nations owe an abiding attachment.

Hero Of Marne Arrives; Acclaimed By Thousands; Lantern Pageant Tonight

Marshal Joffre Gets Rousing Greetings At All Points Of Journey—Tri-Color Flies Over All City In Honor Of Distinguished Visitor

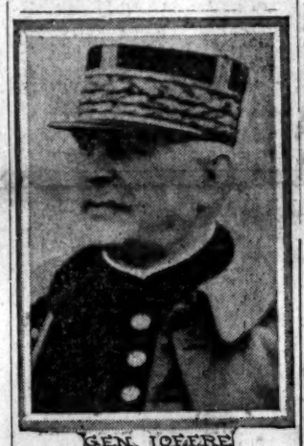
Through the late hours of the day yesterday and long after darkness fell packed throngs lined Frenchtown's flag-decked thoroughfares and near the Shanghai-Nanking railway station twenty thousand people massed in every open area under a galaxy of colored lights for the coming to Shanghai of a Marshal of France.

Dignitaries of the French and the International Settlements and Chinese officialdom of every rank were there to give greeting to the visitor. Crowds filled all the approaches to the station and long before the special train arrived—an hour and a half before it was expected by the general public—long lines of guards had to be thrown out to keep clear a pathway from the station entrance and out beyond the massive electrical arch that cast a brilliant radiance over the scene.

LANCERS ON SCENE

Outside the station detachments of mounted Chinese and Sikh lancers, their standards flying in the breeze, were drawn up and through the length of the station platform Chinese troops with bands of music were stationed waiting.

After the arrival of the train a brief interval was given over to the welcoming extended by French officials headed by M. Wilden, French Consul-General and others who accompanied him. The throngs that bordered a narrow pathway heard a sound of trumpets from the distant end of the long train and as this was followed by the strains of a band of music the ranks of Chinese soldiers came to attention with bayonets flashing.



GEN. JOFFRE

In the center of a little group but seemingly apart from it the waiting lines had a glympse of Marshal Joffre as he approached and passed. He was in full uniform with cap of scarlet and gold braid over the white hair and he strode along through the blare of noise much as he might have done had he been the only person on the platform. With the burdens he has carried in late years, the long journey, his three score and ten with honors heaped upon honors, it may not be wondered that public demonstration has become to him somewhat commonplace and that he is as a traveler who has come a long and weary way.

WAKES MEMORIES

Many of those who saw him pass through the gathered crowds harked back to the time in September of 1914 when the thought of the whole world was centered upon him and upon the outcome of the effort he then put forth. In a white haired old man in uniform that saw a bulky figure of medium height that seemed to radiate some quality of force as irresistable as natural law. That is the impression that Marshal Joffre gives at close range.

Aside from the brief reception at the train no affairs of any sort were arranged for last night and after Marshal Joffre had taken his seat in the waiting automobile he went immediately to the home of Mr. Thesmar at 433 Avenue Joffre where he is to be a guest through his stay. Madame and Mlle. Joffre together with the others of the visiting party went in other automobiles and the line of cars leaving the station was headed by the detachment of Sikh lancers.

The route taken was through Honan and Soochow Roads to The Bund and thence South to Avenue Edward VII, boundary of the French Concession where the Sikh escort gave place to another French military escort. The thousands of Chinese packed along Avenue Joffre from the blazing pillar of tri-colored lights at its junction with Rue de Consulat and westward at length were rewarded only by a glympse at the great French soldier as his automobile swept by them.

THOSE IN PARTY

Marshal Joffre is accompanied by Madame and Mlle. Joffre, General Tang Pao-chao, aide to President Hsu, who is the official representative of the Chinese Government; Mrs. Tang and little daughter; Colonel Issay, Commander Davy, and Major Mallein, his aides; Mr. C. P. Yin, Managing Director of the Shanghai-Nanking Railway; Mr. W. M. Tang of the Bureau of Communications, and Mr. S. K. Chen, special representative of the Bureau of Foreign Affairs.

General Tang, who took his post-graduate army studies in France, was appointed the official representative of the Chinese Government by President Hsu, and has been acting as aide to Marshal Joffre since his arrival at Mukden. Mr. Yin had charge of the special train the Marshal traveled in from Peking to Shanghai, and Mr. Chen of Shanghai went to Nanking to look after the party during their journey here.

From the time the Marshal's flag bedecked special train rolled into the station at Pukow at 11:15 yesterday morning until he sought his bed, weary from the strain of numerous receptions, last night, Marshal Joffre's trip to Shanghai was a triumphal procession.

GREETED AT PUKOW

He was met at Pukow by all the high military, naval and the silkhatted civil officials of the Nanking district including Tuchun Chi of Nanking, Civil Governor Wong, Commissioner of Foreign Affairs Wen of Nanking, General Kung, Commander of the Nanking garrison, Chief of Police Wong, Mr. Chen and the Nanking consular officials.

Thousands of Chinese crowded about the Pukow station to catch a glimpse of the famous foreign fighter and several companies of crack Chinese troops were drawn up in parade formation on the station platform. Two bands, one sent especially from the Tuchun's yamen in Nanking, played the Marseillaise and other stirring French war songs while the Marshal, followed by his party, reviewed the troops.

As he passed down the long line of soldiers, China's crack troops in parade dress and spick and span for the special occasion, the Marshal saluted snappily and nodded smilingly to the troop commanders.

From the station, decked in flags, the party went directly to the Pukow-Nanking ferry where a special vessel, also decorated for the occasion, waited them.

Marshal Joffre and the higher officials went immediately to the salon on board where he was presented with photographs of Tuchun Chi, Admiral Doo and other Chinese officials, and by two exquisite Ming vases by Tuchun Chi. The Tuchun proposed the toast to the great French soldier and to Madame and Mlle. Joffre, and the Marshal responded briefly thanking them. Then the entire vessel shook with the tremendous three cheers for Marshal Joffre' given by the high military, naval and civil officials on board.

As soon as the toasts were concluded Marshal Joffre walked out on the deck to catch a glimpse of Pukow behind him and Nanking across the river. It was a beautiful, sunshiny day, ideal for the occasion, and the Marshal stayed on the deck until within

Finance Minister Out, Peking Has Practically Ceased To Function

Acting Premier Refuses To Preside At Cabinet Meetings, Departments Lack Responsible Heads, Schools Facing Shut-Down

BY JOSEF W. HALL
Staff Correspondent of the China Press.

Peking, March 8.—With the departure for Tientsin of the Minister of Finance, Mr. Chang Hu, the Peking government has practially ceased to function. Chang is faced with a threat of impeachment by Tung Kang, the Minister of Justice, who accuses him of bribery, embezzlement and the misuse of government funds. Every government department lacks a responsible head and the Cabinet is unable to sit any more on account of the refusal of Dr. W. W. Yen, the Acting Premier, to preside over the meeting.

The eight government schools in Peking are once more facing suspension owing to the lack of provision of educational funds for the operation of these institutions.

On the day when the remains of General Chiang Kwei-ti, the late Tartar-General of Jehol, were being buried in his home in Anhui, assassins in Peking murdered Mr. Pei Chen-yi, who succeeded Chiang as commander of the two divisions of Jehol troops. The assassins are probably the old devotees of General Chiang who believe that Pei was participating in an intrigue whereby the old Jehol Army might be assimilated by the forces of Tuchun Chang Tso-lin of Mukden.

It will be remembered that despite Chang Tso-lin's imperialism in the three Manchurian provinces, Chiang, during his lifetime, always maintained a defiant attitude towards the Fengtien warlord. Upon his death, Pei, who was chief secretary to the aged general, presented a memorandum to President Hsu, alleged to have been signed by General Chiang, and requesting the Chief Executive to transfer the command of the Jehol troops to Pei.

Because of Pei's close connection with Chiang, the authentity of the document was very much suspected by Chiang's devotees. Recently, it has been charged by the Jehol men that Pei was negotiating with Chang Tso-lin for their assimilation by the Mukden forces, their traditional enemies.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 8.—General Pai Cheng-yi and his wife and grandson were sensationally murdered and two servants dangerously wounded yesterday evening in Peking by a gang of men who rushed into the compound, seized and bound the guards and gatekeeper and then entered the residence and shot down five of the inmates.

The outrage was quickly carried out, the perpetrators escaping before the arrival of the police, whom the neighborhors had summoned.

General Pai succeeded General Chiang Kwei-ti as Commander-in-Chief of the Yichun, with whom General Pai had only served a year when General Chiang died, upon which he reported to the Government that General Chiang, before his death, had expressed a desire that General Pai should become Commander-in-Chief.

In view of General Pai's unpopularity among the Yichun and the absence of robbery on the part of the gang, it is believed that the assassination of the General was due to political or service motives.

Chief Inspector McGregor Honored By His Associates

Chief Inspector MacGregor of the Hongkew Police District, and Mrs. MacGregor, were the recipients of beautiful presents at a farewell party tendered to the Chief Inspector by his associates at the Hongkew Police station yesterday afternoon. The Chief and Mrs. MacGregor are leaving for home Sunday on the Shinyo Maru, for an eight months vacation.

To their Chief, the Hongkew members of the force gave a beautiful suit case, while Mrs. MacGregor's gift was a handsome hand mirror. Sub-Inspector Everson made the presentation speeches.

Practically every member of the force that could get away was present at the reception, which was a jolly affair, despite the sadness that all the boys feel over the approaching absence of Chief MacGregor. All united in wishing them the pleasantest of voyages and an enjoyable stay in their homeland.

The Chief and Mrs. MacGregor are going home via the United States and will make the journey on a leisurely schedule that will allow them time for sight seeing.

Measles Now Is Greatest Menace Among Foreigners

Two hundred and nine Chinese as compared to but eight fortigners died from communicable diseases during the week ending Sunday March 5, according to the report of the commissioner of Public Health made public in today's Municipal Gazette. The disease claiming the greatest number of victims was tuberculosis. Sixteen Chinese and one foreigner succumbed to that illness. The next in importance in point of number of deaths, was measles which claimed eleven foreigners and nine Chinese. Small pox which has been showing a steady decrease in the past few weeks, claimed two foreigners and five Chinese. Scarlet fever, diptheria and typhoid fever were the other diseases causing the most deaths.

HONGKONG BUSY AGAIN; PRESS CALLS TERMS HARD

Victorious Labor Organisations Continue Parades

FUND FOR VICTIMS

Government To Pay "Whether Right Or Wrong"

Special Cable to the China Press

Hongkong, March 7.—Hongkong has resumed business again, the strikers having returned from Canton on special trains and boats. Thousands of strikers and their friends in both Hongkong and Canton are still celebrating the victory, which is now conceded to have been practically complete. The Canton government is now trying to take up the question of closing the port and restricting Chinese travel.

The Hongkong government has given assurances that ample compensation will be paid to the relatives of those who were killed in the border episode, and to the wounded, whether strikers or not, and whether legally right or wrong.

The boys, cooks, coolies and members of office staffs are going back to their positions rapidly, and the harbor has resumed its former appearance of bristling activity after eight weeks of dullness. The newspapers, while expressing pleasure that the strike is over, lament that the terms were "humiliating to the government and the foreign community."

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, March 8.—Normal conditions were resumed in the Kowloon Shipyards this morning.

The Empress of Asia, the only one of the C. P. S. boats threatened with delay by the strike will leave Hongkong Sunday, March 23, and sail from Shanghai March 25, on its regular schedule.

Schurman Fails To Please Filipinos

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Manila, March 8.—In a speech here last night, Mr. Schurman, the American Minister to China, stated that the results of the Washington Conference would probably hasten the date of Philippine independence, but that it was not advisable for the Filipino leaders to urge independence until the effects of the Conference had been thoroughly tested.

The speech disappointed the Filipinos who had generally regarded Mr. Schurman as an advocate for immediate independence. The leaders have organised a mass meeting and parade in protest this afternoon.

Genoa Conference Set For April 10

Paris, March 7.—Advices from Rome states that the Italian Government has announced that it has accepted April 10 as the date for the opening of the Genoa Conference.

The newspapers understand that the Conference will suspend its labors during Easter.

GILES HONORED

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 8.—Mr. W. R. Giles, the correspondent of several English and American papers, had been decorated on his return from Mukden by the French Government with the order of the "Chevalier du Dragon de l'Annam" for services rendered during the war. Although the decoration was only presented on Friday last, official notification was received in China some months ago that Mr. Giles was to receive the order in question.

NOTICE TO SAILORS

Sailors will meet at the Navy "Y" tonight to form a party to go to Avenue Joffre to witness the lantern procession and demonstration at the Arch. Afterwards moving pictures will be shown at the Navy "Y" and coffee and sandwiches will be served. All interested in Navy "Y" work are cordially invited to join the group at 7:30 o'clock.

Activities Of Navy 'Y' In 1921 Given In Report

A comprehensive review of the varied activities of the Navy Y.M.C.A. is given in the interesting annual report of Mr. Paul W. Brown, Executive Secretary for the year 1921. This report is as follows:

"Each Army or Navy Association is a branch of the Army and Navy Department of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations, whose headquarters are in New York. The objective of the Army and Navy Association is, "The development of Christian Manhood." The work of this branch, as of all others, is such as will develop character and muscle and make the enlisted man a better sailor and a good citizen.

"The estimated attendance computed daily at the building for last year was 52,913. Of this number 43,328 were American sailors, 200 American soldiers, 1360 American merchant seamen, 1600 British sailors, 1685 French sailors, 505 Italian sailors and 4235 civilians, 10,000 men slept in the building during that time. There were 9744 letters written, 3371 parcels checked, 23,507 meals served in the restaurant and $18,820 was kept in our safe by sailors at the building.

"We have in our library about 300 books, these were used 1648 times during the year and 14,500 magazines were sent to ships in almost every port in China.

"The social part of our program is of course very important. The enlisted man has a great deal of leisure time and the Y.M.C.A. is endeavoring to furnish plenty of clean wholesome amusement and recreation, assist them in making helpful contacts with the community and provide the connecting link between themselves and the homes they have left for a time.

"Twenty-one entertainments were held with an attendance of 7830. These were varied and included, dances, Chinese acrobats, magicians and jugglers, concerts, candy pulls, afternoon social gatherings and teas, Chinese dinners, sukiyakas, game nights, seasonal programs for Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year.

"There were also 87 moving picture shows with an attendance of 5270. All entertainments are free to the enlisted men. Their uniform is their membership card, there being no membership fee in the Army and Navy Association. 324 men were placed in homes for dinners and there were 30 home parties with 399 in attendance. 15,757 men used the pool and billiard tables and 5705 other games, such as checkers and chess.

"The report of the religious work compares very favorably with the rest of the activities, special stress always being placed on this part of the program of the association. There were 41 religious meetings held at the building with an attendance of 1585 and 46 held on ships with 2849 in attendance. 561 testaments were given to sailors. Besides these destinctly religious activities, we have endeavored to create a certain Christian atmosphere in all our programs.

"During the year 688 visits were made to sick men aboard ships and in the hospital.

"The building has been used also to further community projects, the Community Church having used it for dinner and socials, and it was used also as the headquarters for the American School campaign.

"All organisations and the community in general have extended help and shown interest in the work of looking after the welfare of the men and officers stationed here.

"The following organisations have accepted special responsibility and are furnishing at least one program of entertainment a month for the men: The American Woman's Club, the American Overseas League, the Community Church and the Minute Girls. The "Minute Girls" are not an organised club but a group of young ladies who have assisted the Y. M. C. A. and can be relied on for help at a minute's notice.

"The members of the Committee of Management of the Navy Y. M. C. A. are, Consul General Edwin S. Cunningham, Admiral Strauss, W. W. Lockwood, Dr. G. F. Fitch, N. A. Viloudaki, J. H. Black, H. H. Cameron, J. H. Dollar, Geo. A. Fitch, W. S. Fleming, Mrs. James MacDonell, Mrs. John Nichols, J. B. Powell, F. R. Sites and C. M. Wentworth.

"A Navy Y. M. C. A. is also operated at Hankow under the direction of this committee for ships of the Yangtsze Patrol.

"Last year approximately 3000 men of the American Asiatic Fleet spent the summer at Chefoo and a special program was put on there for their benefit under the direction of this committee.

"The quarters which are being used at present on Avenue Edward VII are inadequate and even when few ships are stationed here, the building is crowded to capacity. Work on the new six story Navy Y. M. C. A. building will commence within the next few days. The new site is on the corner of Hongkong and Szechuen Roads. The contract calls for the completion of the building within 12 months. With the strictly modern, new quarters the work should expand in a way which is not possible with the present facilities."

WARSHIPS SALUTE

Five Chinese warships were lying in the river, all dressed in the Marshal's honor, and as his launch passed each one the sailors on board stood at a stiff salute until he had passed. As the ship passed the warship Heichow 19 guns were fired in a salute of honor.

As soon as Marshal Joffre had again thanked the Tuchun, Civil Governor and other officials for their courtesies and bade them good-bye the special started for Shanghai. Nanking outdid itself in decorations and ambitious entertainment plans were made in expectation of a brief stop by the Marshal's party but it was impossible to make the necessary lay-over.

Troops of the Nanking command, in spotless uniforms, new shoes and shining equipment passed through the streets all yesterday morning on the march from the garrison to the ferry, and the Nanking Constabulary commanded by Chief of Police Wong, some of the snappiest looking troopers in China, had also been thoroughly inspected, even to the extent of snow-white gloves, for the occasion.

At every stop between Nanking and Shanghai troops were drawn up in review and bands played French martial airs during the brief time allowed. Marshal Joffre viewed them from the platform of his own private car in every case with the exception of Soochow where he walked up the platform and back. Troops were in line and saluted and bands played at several smaller towns along the line despite the fact that the special train did not stop.

STATIONS ARE GAY

Large numbers of Chinese greeted the train at every station and at every stop Marshal Joffre added to the several bales of visiting cards he had already accumulated.

The entire train was decorated with flags and filled with flowers and a special tiffin was given for the members of the party with French and Chinese crossed flags formed of colored kernels of rice as table decorations. The menu was also in both French and Chinese and engraved in honor of the event.

Marshal Joffre spent the greater part of his time on the ride to Shanghai resting in his private car as he was obviously tired out from his long trip. While he still looks the grand old poilu who endeared himself to the hearts of every individual in all the Allied nations during the great war he looks wan and weary as a result of the ceaseless round entertainments in his honor that have been daily occurrences since his arrival in the Far East. Madame and Mlle. Joffre also have felt the strain of the long journey. Mme. Joffre has become especially fond of little 6-year old Lydia Tang, daughter of General Tang, during the trip across China and spent considerable time playing with the little tot on the trip.

On the ferry crossing the river Madame Joffre fed little Lydia sweet cookies while the speech-making and exchange of felicitations was in progress and the military and civil members of the gathering were drinking champagne. Marshal Joffre sipped just a little of one glass of the bubbling wine during the entire trip.

Commissioner of Foreign Affairs Wen of Nanking acted as Madame Joffre's escort from Pukow to Nanking. He just recently returned from the Washington Conference and has a long valuable record in the Chinese government service. Mr. Chen, special representative of the Commissioner for Foreign Affairs here, who conducted the party here from Nanking, was chosen for the honor because he has been honored by France with the Legion of Honor.

PAGEANT TONIGHT

The outstanding feature of to-day's demonstration will be the illuminated pageant tonight. Fully 30,000 Chinese will participate in this procession. The lanterns made of silk and fancy paper will cost about $50,000, it is estimated. They will represent full theatrical performances, boats, birds and animals, vehicles and buildings as well as flowers and plants. All the shops will be be flagged and strung with lanterns. Participants will consist of school children, members of public bodies, employes of the municipal departments and civilians.

The Street Unions of the concession yesterday presented a huge tablet to the French Consul-General, M. Wilden, for him to hand over to the French soldier. On it is inscribed four Chinese characters, meaning "Right Over Might." The Kiangsu Self-Government Association made a similar presentation. Many other organisations despatched letters of greetings to the Marshal.

TROOPS FIRE ON BELFAST CROWD; TWO BOYS KILLED

Word Received Of Terrible Battle In Limerick

(China Press Service)

Belfast, March 7.—News of the impending trouble in Limerick has a bad effect on the crowds here today and mobs gathered in many squares and streets. Late in the afternoon, the demonstrations became exceedingly threatening and the troops were compelled to fire on the crowd.

Two boys were killed and a third wounded. No casualties were sustained by the troops and none of them was hurt beyond a few bruised by bricks thrown by the crowd.

Word has been received here through private sources that a terrible battle has been fought in Limerick between the faction of Mid-Limerick Republicans and those upholding the Provisional Government. No official confirmation could be obtained and officials stated that they were advised that all serious affrays in Limerick had been averted.

So serious, however, is the situation in Belfast that the Major has threatened to declare martial law unless the disorder is stopped immediately.

The more level headed among the leaders of the crowds are urging moderation and seeking to prevent reprisals for the shootings this afternoon.

Found a Cure for Indigestion.

"I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for indigestion and find they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different medicines. I am nearly fifty one years of age and have suffered a great deal from indigestion. I can eat almost anything I want to, now," writes George W. Emory, Dock Mills, Ala. These tablets contain no pepsin but strengthen the stomach and enable it to digest the food naturally.

GERMANY AND FRANCE 'PULLING' FOR LL'D GEORGE

Berlin And Paris Hope Will Stay On The Job; Balfour's Plea

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 7.—The political crisis has excited intense interest abroad. It is worthy of note that both the French and German comments display anxiet, lest Mr. Lloyd George should resign, the former being of the opinion that his resignation would endanger Anglo-French rapproachment an eventual alliance, and the latter regarding the Prime Minister as a protagonist of European reconciliation and reconstruction.

London, March 7.—Mr. Balfour was given a luncheon in the city at the Carlton Club today.

Referring to the Conservative differences on the subject of the Coalition, Mr. Balfour said, he would remain a Conservative until he went to the land where political parties no longer interested him (laughter). Nevertheless, he asserted emphatically, that the country's interests were best served at present by a coalition.

The two party system was admirable, he declared, but it was a fair weather system. The Irish settlement illustrated the value of the Coalition. There never was a time when the co-operation of the parties was more necessary than now.

It was impossible, he said, to think that complex problems like unemployment, India, Egypt and Ireland could have been handled more successfully by a government drawn from a restricted section of the population, than by a government drawn from all shades of opinion working harmoniously together.

He paid tribute to Mr. Lloyd George as one of the greatest figures in the world's history and asked, what was the use of abusing him.

WU'S SEIZURE OF FUNDS DRAWING MANY PROTESTS

Railway Reports He Garnished $2,030,000 From Road For Own Use

Peking, Mar. 7.—The Ministry of Finance has made a demand on Tsao Kun for the remittance of $210,000 of the salt revenue of Hotung that is now due for payment to the Government treasury. The money was seized last month by Wu Pei-fu for military expenses. The Diplomatic Corps has addressed a protest against Wu's action, threatening not to release any more salt surplus if the offense is left unchalleged.

A second note is expected to be addressed soon to the Peking Government by the Ministers from Great Britain, Japan and France to protest against the seizure of the salt revenue.

According to a report of the Peking-Hankow Railway, Wu Pei-fu has appropriated the sum of $2,030,000 from the railway funds for his own use.

Anhwei Officials Feathering Nests

(China Press Correspondence)

Chaohsien, Anhwei, March 6.—The rice crop in this section last year was about 50 percent of the normal, and residents requested last November that an embargo be placed on the export of rice. For the sake of their own personal profit in the way of likin duties, the officials here have refused to do so with the result that boats are coming in great numbers to this port and carrying away quantities of rice. Soon there will be insufficient for local needs.

Thousands of refugees are passing through here daily for ports down the river, but so far few are staying here. The country here is at the mercy of a band of corrupt officials, of inferior intellect, who have never held official position before and who seem to have only one motive, to get rich quick.

Glaucus Wreck Echo Heard In Suit In British Court

An interesting action involving Tls. $5,000 brought in the British Supreme Court by the Shanghai Tug and Lighter Company for salvage work done for the Ocean Steamship Company (Messrs. Butterfield and Swire) was heard yesterday by Judge Peter Grain. Mr. McNeil appeared for the plaintiffs and Mr. McLeod for the defendants.

Mr. McNeil said that shortly after 3 a.m. on August 22 the plaintiffs were informed by the agents of the steamship Glaucus belonging to the defendants that the vessel was ashore on the Tungsha Spit, about forty miles from Shanghai and in danger, and the plaintiffs were instructed by the owners' agents to render all possible assistance. Accordingly at 6 a.m. on the same day the tug Victoria was despatched to the vessel, and soon after the tug Alexandra of the plaintiffs was also despatched with representatives of the plaintiffs and the defendants' agents on board. The Victoria arrived off the Glaucus, and soon after towed on the stern of the ship as directed by those in charge of her, but without effect, although the ship used her engines to assist, and at 1:45 p.m. orders were given for towing and laying a small anchor and 100 fathoms of wire hawser astern of the Glaucus, which was done.

On the following day the Victoria and the plaintiffs' rescue and salvage tug St. Dominic, which had at that time arrived to the assistance of the Glaucus, took a hawser from the Glaucus and towed on her stern without effect until after high water tide at 2.40 a.m. Owing to the shallowness of the water in which the Glaucus was stranded it was found impossible to establish connection with her because of the want of water on the Spit, with the result that another of the plaintiffs' tugs, the Fuhle, left Shanghai that day in charge of a pilot arriving at Tungchow Spit at 10:40 a.m., leaving immediately for Shanghai with the representatives of the plaintiffs and the defendants' owners on board and towing lighter 234, the lighter being afterwards dropped at Woosung with instructions to anchor.

This lighter was sent back as the weather appeared threatening and unsettled On the night of August 23 the St. Dominic and Victoria loaded out a 4½ ton anchor and 105 fathoms of chain from the starboard bow of the Glaucus, and on the following morning the motor boat of the Glaucus was reported to have broken down about three miles away and was drifting seawards with four men on board. The Victoria thereupon steamed out and after some difficulty found and rescued her and her crew.

On the following day at the request of the master of the Glaucus the St. Dominic and Victoria took soundings around the Glaucus which had not been moved, and as a result of the previous towage moved her ahead about four yards to the northward. The St. Dominic and Victoria began to tow on the starboard bow of the Glaucus, and the ship hove on her anchor, which however failed to hold and was afterwards relayed by the two tugs.

On August 26 the St. Dominic, Victoria and Alexandra all towed on the stern of the Glaucus, moving her stern about thirty feet, and the Glaucus was put alongside the Kiukiang to assist her discharge. Eventually 150 coolies were despatched from Shanghai as soon as the weather moderated, and on August 30 with the assistance of the St. Dominic and the Victoria the Glaucus was enabled to proceed into port under her own steam.

Mr. McNeil stated that in rendering such services the plaintiffs were acting under the instructions of the defendants and incurred considerable risk. By the services of the plaintiffs the Glaucus was dragged off Tungshaw Spit where she was in an extremely exposed position and had it gone on to blow at this time would have been in a very considerable peril. The period in which the salvage operations were carried out was in the worst part of the typhoon season when the Siccawei Observatory stated that a typhoon was approaching the mouth of the Yangtsze. Had the typhoon reached the mouth of the Yangtsze it would have stopped the salvage operations and the Glaucus would then have been left exposed to both wind and sea with the inevitable result that great damage might have been possible and even a wreck.

THREE AMERICAN NINES TO VISIT ORIENT THIS YEAR; MAY BE BROUGHT TO S'HAI

Game Promises Well For 1922; Management, Players And Public All As One

With at least three American baseball teams coming to the Far East this season and every other nine in the Orient working up to a form that will rank better than anything shown in previous years, and all keen for outside games, the game promises well for 1922. A little bit of money, a little more of foresight, and a lot of support from the local public can bring to Shanghai this year the best baseball it has ever seen.

Managers of the local club will start the season handicapped by the record of the Olympic times of the spring of 1921, when the best of China, Japan, and the Philippines were here for games. Yet if things go well the coming season may see as good or better ball played on local lots as ever was before.

The best and most desirable teams perhaps will be the three American nines which are already booked to visit Japan. They are the Indiana University which plays a schedule in Nippon late in April; the University of Pennsylvania which visits Japan in early fall, and a team of Big Leaguers headed by Herbert Hunter, a big Leaguer himself who recently finished a contract as coach with the Waseda University. The latter aggregation is booked for a tour of Japan and the Philippines early in November.

In addition there are the Chinese-Hawaiian Stars, who played here a few years ago and are now bidding for dates in Japan and Manila, the champions of the several leagues in Manila, the Infantry nine from Tientsin which claimed the Northern title last year, and the Peking Marines.

The Tientsin team, according to a summary of 1922 prospects made recently by a baseball authority in the Northern town promises to turn out a team different in lineup from last year, yet as classy as the gang of 1921. The Army men have suffered several losses but with replacements, have built up a new organisation which promises well.

Peking has not gotten started yet in winter baseball, and Japanese teams are all under cover. Manila now is the center of the game in the Far East with the regular winter league competitions and the special carnival tourneys. And Shanghai is sitting tight, waiting on weather for a suitable time to get out in the field.

The management and the committee, however are watchful for opportunities to book up teams from outside ports, and with the solid backing of players and public this season, it may be expected that their efforts to bring some of the strong teams in the near neighborhood to Shanghai will be successful.

Record Made For Basketball Fouls

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 28.—A new high record for fouls called was established here in the Wesleyan-Union game last Saturday, when Referee Hayes of the Connecticut Agricultural College called a total of forty-seven on both teams, twenty-seven on Union and twenty on Wesleyan. Twenty-one of these were turned into points recorded in the score. Capt. Robertson of Wesleyan had a shade the better of Rinaldi of Union in making baskets from the foul line.

R. B. Nichols, Second Oldest Basketeer In Town

Nichols, who captained the Amtraco five this season and brought his team through a hard schedule to third position, is a real veteran of the game. He began throwing baskets eighteen years ago in a preparatory school in Kansas. He captained the Illinois College team in 1909-10 and won the championship of the state. He has played the game at every opportunity since. Nichols has played six seasons in Shanghai. He captained the Columbia Country Club five last year. He is only ranked in basketball seniority by Dr. Gray, the clever forward of the Bearcats.

Intercollegiate Basketball Race Narrows Down

New York, Feb. 7.—Competition for the championship of the Intercollegiate Basketball League now that the first month of the schedule is drawing to a close has begun to narrow down to three of the consistent winners in the tournament. Pennsylvania, Princton and Dartmouth have turned in such high class performances in their opening games as to segregate them from Corwell, which has disappointed basketball followers this year, and from Columbia and Yale, who from present indications are destined to stage a private battle for cellar honors.

As concerns the three leading quintets, there is very little information upon which to base one's choice for the ultimate championship. Princeton, it is true, triumphed over Dartmouth at Hanover several weeks ago, but the slight margin of a single point which separated them is not nearly sufficient to establish the superiority of the one over the other. Pennsylvania, however, again has demonstrated that coordination of team play that characterised the Red and Blue machine of last year and of 1920. Its activities have been directed so far against Yale and Columbia, the two weakest fives in the league, so that not much faith can be placed in the results of those games.

Interest in the campaign which is to decide the champion has been eclipsed only by the greater concern being evidenced over the final selection of the All Eastern players. In recent years Pennsylvania has so far surpassed its opponents as to fined itself usually represented on the annual choice quintet by at least two of its star performers. This year, however, finds several of the other colleges each fortunately possessed of a player of such excellent caliber as to make competition for the honors of the keenest sort.

JOHNSON TAKES SHANGHAI CUP CHAMPIONSHIP BY WIN OVER CAPT. E. I. M. BARRETT

Trails Score Until Near End Of Play When Captain Weakens

R. C. K. Johnson, amateur billiard champion of Shanghai who acquired the premier title a few weeks ago by defeating the veteran C. W. Porter at the Town Hall, annexed the Shanghai Cup championship at the Shanghai Club Tuesday night by beating Capt. E. I. M. Barrett, after an exciting game, 1,000 to 977.

The match was the second time in the competition that Johnson had met and beaten Barrett, the latter having suffered defeat in the second round at a score of 800-429.

Two sessions were played in the final, 500 points each constituting the half. Barrett led 500-452 at the end of the first half, and in the second period held his own until close to the finish when he fell down in his play and lost the match.

Soon after opening play in the second half Barrett led the champion by 100, leading by 130 at 800, but when reaching the 900 point Johnson, playing in regular breaks was sixty short of Barrett's score. At 958, both men were level.

With the championship within his grasp, Barret fell down on 977, while the champion went out with a break of 40, winning by 23 points.

The game was good throughout, although it was presumed by many spectators that Johnson won on safety play.

BOOKING OPENS FOR RECITALS OF GREAT ARTISTS

Booking for the costume recitals to be given in Shanghai by the famous singer, Lydia Lipkowska, and the pianist, Alexander Sklarevski, on March 22 and March 25, will begin today, at Moutrie's.

The concerts, under the direction of Mr. A. Strok, will be given at the Olympic theater. Lipkowska needs no introduction to music lovers. Her voice and her beauty have charmed audiences all over the world ever since her debut in the Russian capital of the Romanoffs, when the late Czar remarked to one of his aides on the beautiful voice and presence of "this child."

Lipkowska's youthful voice has matured to an even fuller richness and beauty now, as her recent extraordinary successes in the musical centers of the world bear testimony.

Sklarevski, gifted from childhood, has been heard in the Orient before. He gave more than one hundred and fifty concerts in China, Japan, Philippine Islands, Indo-China, Straits Settlements, Dutch East Indies, British East India and elsewhere in the East before returning to the United States, via Europe. He is coming back to Shanghai direct from a brilliant success in New York City.

"Stealing My Stuff" Bryan Says Of Pacts

London, March 8.—Messages from Washington show that the Pacific Treaty debate in the Senate is now well under way and will continue without interruption until the vote is taken. The opening speeches laid stress on the importance to America of the abrogation of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance but the Irreconciliables have declared that the Alliance is extended by the inclusion of America and France.

Senator Borah asked whether the Pacific Treaty abrogated, nullified or modified the Lansing-Ishii agreement. Senator Underwood replied in the affirmative, but a resolution requesting information on the subject from the President was finally passed with the assent of the Republicans.

In the course of the debate, Senator Lodge described the Treaty as the most important matter at present before the country and declared that the majority of the party intended to keep it continuously before the Senate until it was disposed of.

Some of the Democrats are attacking Senator Lodge, but it is considered that the mass of the American people will accept the Treaty with its compulsion agreements and that they are inclined to resent the time wasted by the political hair-splitting when very important domestic questions await action.

The attitude of the saner and more cautious Democrats is supported by the statement of Mr. W. J. Bryan that the Treaty is merely an imitation of his contribution to foreign affairs when he was Secretary of State. The Democrats are therefore unlikely to press the fight over the treaties which the country generally applauds.

(China Press Service)

Washington, March 7.—Senator Kellogg debating on the Four Power Treaty said that it was so free from entangling committments that reservations might be sources of embarrassment without gathering any advantage.

He said that if the United States adopted unnecessary reservations other nations might do the same or worse and the result would be the weakening of the Treaty to a negligible thing.

Russian Refugee Issue In Commons

London, March 7.—The problem of the hundreds of thousands of Russian refugees in Europe was raised in the House of Commons today.

In moving a supplementary Foreign Office estimate Mr. Cecil Harmsworth said it included £300,000, making a total of £1,180,000 for the maintenance of ex-officers and their families in Egypt, Cyprus and Malta, of General Denikin's force. These refugees originally numbered 10,000 but now only 3,000, as many had joined General Wrangel's movement.

The League of Nations, he declared, was considering the question of taking over the whole problem of Russian refugees and of placing them in the Balkan Countries friendly towards them, the cost being met by the Powers interested.

The Pneumonia Month.

March is a typical pneumonia month and usually gives a high rate of mortality for the disease. After a long and hard winter, the system loses much of its resistance and people grow careless. When every cold, no matter how slight, is given prompt and intelligent attention, there is much less danger of pneumonia. It should be borne in mind that pneumonia is a germ disease and breeds in the throat. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is an expectorant and cleans out the germ ladened mucus and not only cures a cold but prevents its resulting in pneumonia. It is pleasant to take. Children take it willingly. Sold Everywhere

March 8, 1922

Spot and forward bar silver were each up ⅛d. in London yesterday.

The New York price advanced to 64¼ cents, and the London-New York cross rate declined to 438⅛. The only changes in the official quotations here today were a rise in the Gold Dollar rate to 69¼ and in the Franc rate to 760.

The market here today was pretty much a repetition of that ruling this last day or two, opening steady and closing firm. In the early part of the morning business in Sterling was done at 3-2⅛ for March, 3-2⅝ for April and 3-2¼ for May.

Gold Dollars were done at 70¼ for March, 70 for April and 69⅝ for May. However, speculators were again very heavy sellers today and, as banks were not anxious buyers, rates firmed up, and the market closed with good sellers of Sterling at 3-2⅞ for March, 3-2⅝ for April and 3-2⅝ for May.

There were sellers of Gold Dollars at the close at 70¾ for March, 70½ for April and 70¼ for May. India again bought silver in London yesterday, and the market there is reported as being uncertain.

New York advise their market as being steady for spot delivery and easy for forward.

FINANCE AND MONEY

Bar silver has dropped steadily from 33⅛d. ready 32⅞d. forward on the 23rd inst. to 32⅛d. ready, 31⅝d. forward, the rate on March 1. T.T. on London has dropped rapidly from 3s. 3⅛d. to 3s. 1⅛d. the closing rate today, with a weak market during the week under review. 4 m-s. opened on 23rd ultimo at 3s. 4¼d. and today probably under 3s. 3d. could be placed. The New York-London cross-rate dropped from 440¾ to 439¾, and rose again to 443⅞ the rate wired on February 28, Chinese market rates: Shanghai Tls. 97.45. Local currency $70.425, Native interest 9 percent. There has been during the whole week a persistent demand for T.T. on Shanghai but banks have been unwilling sellers and as high as 97¾ has been done.

EXPORTS

The market for most produce is somewhat easier with the exception of goatskins and wood oil. Ready supplies of the latter are very scarce. A little business is reported in cow hides, tallow and China grass and some sesamum seed is said to have been bought by Japanese at a fairly high figure.

IMPORTS

Piece Goods:—There is a fair enquiry for stock goods but no change in prices except for greys which are stronger. The market if any thing is a shade firmer owing to the fall in exchange. Clearances are good.

Yarn:—Nothing of interest to report.

Germany Must Keep Faith, Says Foreign Minister

Berlin, March 7.—In the Reichstag today, the Foreign Minister, Dr. Walther Rathenau, said that the Government was agreed that an effort must be made at all costs to show her former enemies that Germany was prepared to discharge her reparations liabilities to the limit of her capacity.

Dr. Rathenau expressed the hope that the Entente would enable Germany to raise a large loan with which she could satisfy her creditors.

(China Press Service)

Paris, March 7.—The reparations commission reported that German payments in cash and material cessions of state property to December 31, 1921 aggregated 6,487,850,000 gold marks of which about 1,200,000,000 was in cash.

A Tribute To Marshal Joffre

BY FRANCIS ZIA

It is most fitting that hero worship should be an inborn trait of mankind, which does not in any way lose its intensity through the ravages of time. When the hour of supreme trial came, the hero whom we greet today had no idea whether or not he would survive the ordeal to become the object of public homage. To him duty was everything and to duty all else was made subordinate, even life itself. When the hero has emerged triumphant from the boom and clash and din of battle, when he has "fought the good fight and won the victory," the reasons become overwhelming why the people, both of his homeland and of other lands, should vie with each other in showering on him marks of appreciation and admiration.

Here lies the secret of the outburst of popular enthusiasm which has characterised the series of welcoming receptions that have been held in Peking and Tientsin and that are to be held in our own midst in honor of one to whom honor is super-eminently due, Marshal Joseph Jacques Cesaire Joffre, France's most illustrious soldier, who has immortalised his name in the hearts of all Frenchmen and whose wonderful contribution to the salvage of civilisation is recognised and gratefully remembered throughout the civilised world.

Intoxicated by the early successes of their offensive operations, the German invaders fully determined to make short work of their French opponents. For, as we may still easily recall, it was on August 3, 1914 that Germany declared war on France after demanding in vain a free passage through Belgium on the previous day; on August 4 that German troops under Gen. Von Kluck forced their way across the border and halted at Liege, on August 20 that the German occupation of Brussels was completed, on August 24 that the German army entered France near Lille and wrought havoc at Louvain two days later; on August 30 that the Germans occupied Amiens, on September 3 that the Germans neared Paris and that the seat of the French government was transferred to Bordeaux, and on September 4 that the last item of the onward march of German penetration was carried out, the occupation of Rheims.

No wonder that under such circumstances the German High Command bent on the execution of the Deutschland Uber Alles policy of Germany's Superman should have declared thus: "We have more men, better guns, better troops; we will violate the neutrality of Belgium, turn the French fortresses and, arriving in the plains of Northern France, we will destroy the French armies, take Paris, and then turn east and dispose of Russia. We shall win the war in six weeks and take Paris in seven. We shall hold France to ransom and dispose of the French danger for all time."

If it was true, as Marshal Foch had contended, that a genuine victory must be won on moral grounds, then such a grandiose plan based on the unworthy motive of world conquest was bound to result in failure. Directing the defensive operations and the strategic retreats at that epochal period was General Joffre, placed in supreme command of the French forces on August 7, who with the master mind of a foremost strategist in modern warfare, was awaiting to surprise his foe when the hour came at which the greatest decisive battle of modern history was to be waged, the Battle of the Marne, which completely destroyed the wild dreams of German world imperialism, and which marked the turning-point of an aggressive campaign that was a real menace to France and Great Britain and was designed to be the vehicle for conveying Berlin to the goal of supremacy such as ancient Rome enjoyed in the days when it had reached the zenith of its imperial pomp and power.

The victory achieved by Marshal Joffre at the Battle of the Marne is full of suggestions as to the requisite factors of success on the modern battle-field. Whatever may be said of the importance of the new-born weapons of war which science has produced for the destruction of cities and the wholesale slaughter of human beings, we find that in Marshal Joffre the factors of success in the face of heavy odds were conspicuous in this historic campaign.

He had the power of uplifting and sustaining the morale of his armies. On September 5 when he issued orders for the cessation of all retreats and resolved to wage an offensive battle, he appealed to all the commanders in these memorable words of his famous order: "The hour has come to advance at all costs, and to die where you stand rather than give way." What followed showed that this order was literally carried out.

He knew how to spring a fatal surprise on the enemy when both the time and place as well as the strength of his own forces were destined to crown his efforts with success. In the beginning of September (1914) Von Kluck, the German general, who had in mind the subjugation of Paris, was trying to cut off General Joffre from the French Capital, and in this he would most likely have succeeded had it been possible for him to combine his own forces with those of the German Crown Prince. Seeing that delay was disastrous and feeling assured that the German general had much under-rated the strength of the French army, regarding its constituents as men scattered and defeated in the previous engagements, the soldier of the hour jumped into his scheme of a counter-attack, which was formulated after a comprehensive survey of the whole situation. Together with General Gallieni he had a new and strong army, that of General Maunoury, transported from Paris by automobiles to strike on the flank of the enemy. The duties of General Maunoury and General Foch, the two attacking French generals, were so mapped out that the former by effecting a dislocation in the German lines, made possible the penetration of Foch who had the distinction of striking the decisive blow in the battle on Sept. 9 at La Fere-Champenoise.

Marshal Joffre had a wonderful power of intuition in the selection of his officers, and his recognition of the value of Foch's services was a proof that he could tell a commander's worth without relying on a record of meritorious active service. He called Foch "the first strategist in Europe," a title well justified by the unexampled record of the Generalissimo of the Allied forces.

The memory of these and other distinctive features of generalship should be cherished when praises are given to the phenomenal success of the Battle of the Marne, this history-making conflict participated in by far more than two million men over a front of no less than one hundred and fifty miles, stretching from the environs of Paris to the forts of Verdun, and brought to a close on the morning of Sept. 10 when Kluck's forces started their retreat, leaving the French pursuers the double-prize of an immense quantity of war materials and a large number of war prisoners.

Marshal Joffre was born in Rivesaltes, Pyrenees, in 1852. In 1868 he entered the Ecole Polytechnique to study military engineering. During the Franco-Prussian War he entered active service for the first time and served in an artillery battery. This was in September, 1870. After the war he returned to the Polytechnique. The rank of captain was conferred on him in 1874. He helped to prepare the plans for the defense of Pontarlier. In 1883-84 he fought under Courbet in Tonking. Under Dodds in Dahomey he again entered active service in 1893. He figured prominently in the French occupation of Timbuktu in 1894 and in the fortification of Diego Suarez in Madagascar in 1897.

Following his return to France he taught in the Higher War School for a time and was promoted to the rank of brigadier general of a division. In July, 1911, he was appointed Chief of the General Staff. At that time he was in command of the Second Army Corps at Amiens. The introduction of the law under which every Frenchman is required to enrol for three years of military service was largely due to Joffre's efforts. In November, 1914, he was the recipient of a war medal conferred on him by President Poincare for his services in the initial stages of the great war.

At the Inter-Allied War Council held on the 6th and 7th of December, 1915 he recommended the combined attacks of the Allies on all the fronts, thus co-ordinating the efforts of the French, British, Russian and Italian armies. On July 1, 1916, aided by General Douglas Haig, who was in command of the British forces, he took the offensive on the Somme resulting in the saving of Verdun, the recovery of 25 villages, the capture of 35,000 war prisoners of Germany and 150 field guns. On the 7th of December 1916 he was nominated Counsellor to the War Committee and President of the Superior War Council of the Allies. On the 26th of December, 1916, to the joy of the whole French nation he was created a Marshal of France. He gave unmistakable evidence of his spirit of self-effacement in 1918 when he strongly recommended the appointment of Field Marshal Foch as the commander-in-chief of all the Allied Forces. In 1919 he was enrolled as a member of the French Academy. After the signing of the armistice he was sent on a special mission to the United States where he was received with high official honors and enthusiastically acclaimed by the people. His sympathetic attitude towards the soldiers has earned for him the coveted title of "Papa Joffre."

The trip of Marshal Joffre to the Orient will be sure to leave in his own memory indelible impressions of a happy time in company with Madame and Mademoiselle Joffre, of numerous manifestations of affectionate admiration on the part of French communities settled in various trade centers of the Far East, and of state honors in the form of distinctive medals conferred on him during his sojourn in Tokio and Peking.

So far as Oriental peoples are concerned, his visit is fraught with a moral significance which will be a source of far-reaching influence for good. To the militarists in both China and Japan his personal example affords abundant food for serious reflection on the wisdom of a soldier to be content to bow to the supremacy of civil rule instead of seeking the deceptive gains of a military oligarchy which spells misfortune on all sides.

Visits of prominent Frenchmen such as that of Marshal Joffre and that of ex-Premier Painleve last year are highly conducive to the spirit of mutual understanding between two people, both of whom will be greatly benefited by endeavoring to evolve an ideal system of culture that will embody the superior elements of the Oriental and Occidental civilisations. May we not predict that Marshal Joffre's sojourn in China will be instrumental in ushering in a new era of Franco-Chinese cooperation from the political, educational, economic and social standpoints?

Correspondence

Gov. Maia's Widow and Child

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir:—I have received this morning, whilst hard at work, a printed circular with the heading "Subscription to the Widow and Child of ex-Governor Maia," signed by Mr. J. J. de Souza, as Chairman of the "Club Lusitano de Shanghai," in which a contribution of not over $3.00 (a funny and novel way of approaching people for funds) for the widow and child of the ex-Governor of Macao, who was assassinated in the late revolution in Lisbon of October 19 last, was asked.

The circular in question states that both the widow and child of Governor Maia were left totally unprovided for. This, however, is not correct and only shows that the signatory of the circular is absolutely ignorant of the true situation, for, according to the Portuguese press, the widow above referred to is receiving a subsidy from the Portuguese Government of about $700.00 per mensem, and such being the case, I, for one, am dying to know the necessity of any subscription, though sympathising with Mrs. Maia in her sad bereavement.

The object of this letter is to know whether this new stunt of the beloved Chairman of the Club is the product of some illusion of his. Enclosing my card, I am, etc.,

Sea Salt As Health Key

Iodin Element In Ocean Brine Found To Be Important Factor—Diseases Traced To Its Lack

BY VAN BUREN THORNE, M.D.

Dr. Emery R. Hayhurst, Professor of Hygiene at the Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, suggests the use of sea water as a condiment in place of salt on account of its iodin content, or the substitution of a salt containing iodin (an iodised salt) in place of the common table salt now in use. The latter contains no iodin. Many scientists recognise the deficiency of iodin in the diet, and have reached the conclusion that its absence is responsible in many instances for goiter and other anoections in man and in animals.

At the end of an article on "The Present-Day Sources of Common Salt in Relation to Health and Especially to Iodin Scarcity and Goiter," which Professor Hayhurst contributed to the Jan. 7 issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association as a paper from the Division of Industrial Hygiene, Ohio State Department of Health, he writer says:

"An analogy should be drawn from sea life and a precept taken from evolution. Of the dependable sources of iodin in nature—sea air, sea food and sea water—it is to sea water, used perhaps in place of common salt as a condiment, that inland dwellers should look. This substitution would appear to offer a complete solution to the iodin deficiency problem, if nothing else, while evidence would tend to show that other constituents of sea water have also an undoubted place in the economy of the higher animal organism, perhaps to the extent of precluding some diseases which are likewise, possibly, of a deficiency type. Common salt for dietary purposes should include not only sodium chloride but also sodium iodid, and undoubtedly many of its other original concomitants. For geochemical reasons, great care should be taken in selecting its source, if it is not actually derived always from sea water. It must then be handled commercially in a manner to retain these constituents."

IODIN AND GOITER

In the course of his article, Professor Hayhurst cites a great many authorities on the points he takes up, but states at the outset that "it is not the purpose of this paper to discuss the iodin theory or the use of iodin in the prevention of goiter and its associated conditions."

Here is a summary of the points considered in relation to his general argument:

The question of the significance of iodin in the prevention of goiter is left to the authorities that have been cited.

The question of the observed scarcity of iodin in food for man and animals is, also, left to the authorities cited.

While iodin may occur in natural deposits along with chlorin, usually in the form of the sodium salt, it is never obtained from such sources commercially because it occurs in too limited quantities. Chile saltpeter is the chief source of iodin.

The sea is the great storehouse of iodin, where it completes a cycle from inorganic compounds to organic life and return.

The salts of sea water are constant in both quality and quantity. Sodium chlorid comprises 77.8 percent, magnesium chlorid 10.9 percent, with many compounds, including sodium iodid, which composes the remaining 11.3 percent. It has an average total salinity of 3.4404 percent. All of the salts in sea water are unusually soluble in plain water.

The great solubility of sodium iodid accounts for its almost complete absence from the land surface and perhaps for some of the peculiarities noted in regard to the incidence of goiter.

Authorities are agreed that goiter is infrequent in both animals and men along the sea. The same is true also of some fishes (salmon) which inhabit both fresh water and sea water, tending to develop goiters in the former and none in the latter. Apparently sea animals do not have goiter.

Practically all salt used in the United States for dietary consumption is obtained from inland sources by the evaporation of brines, which for the most part are inherently free of iodin.

IODIN AS FOOD CONSTITUENT

"Cameron," the author says, "succinctly summarises the situation as follows: The iodin content of the environment determines the diet of plant life in the sea, and to this fact is due the marked differences in iodin found in fresh water plants and vegetables, on the one hand, and marine algae on the other: 'all sea species of animals contain iodin;' and, 'land plants contain very much less iodin, although it is widely distributed in time.' Forbes and Beegle, after an exhaustive inquiry into the iodin content of foods of man and domestic animals, say, in answer to the usually assumed wide distribution of iodin: 'The evidence seems much more to emphasise the rarity and the accidental nature of iodin as a food constituent.'"

"Why there should be this natural deficiency of iodin in diets is curious," the author continues, "yet its scarcity in nature has been long known to geochemists, as well as its infrequency of occurrence in salt sources by commercial and industrial chemists. Sloan, following Marine's suggestion for animals, advocates an iodised salt for the use of human beings, the proportion of sodium iodid to salt to be 1 to 5,000, and he observes that, in the evaporation of salt brines, the mother liquor which is removed takes with it the natural content of iodin which is originally found in most of the salt brines from which salt is crystallised."

"Both Forbes and Beegle and Bohn report the entire absence of iodin in various forms of market salt examined. Foulk, in 1906, found neither iodin nor bromin in a finished product of Pomeroy (Ohio) salt, although the brine contained both. Having made a number of industrial hygiene surveys in Ohio, including a survey of the salt industry, and having noted the by-products activity at some plants, I have taken occasion during the last Summer to investigate the subject of the removal of iodin from the original salt sources, and I find a peculiar situation which I believe to be of considerable significance.'

Professor Hayhurst says, quoting Abel and Halla, "The sea is the great storehouse of iodin." Certain plants (the giant sea help) store up relatively large amounts of it. They disintegrate and it returns to the sea, "thus an iodin cycle is established; but it includes the sea only. Sea plants, along with Chile saltpeter, are its chief commercial sources."

The author says the suggestion is made that sea organisms transform the inorganic iodin compounds of the depths into the organic compounds found in the upper strata of sea waters. He quotes Blackmore as estimating the value of iodin in a cubic mile of sea water at $62,003,200 and the gold in the same quantity of sea water at $92,184,000.

SOLUBILITY OF SEA SALTS

"The great solubility of sea salts is noteworthy," the author continues, "for it is found that, after evaporating sea water, the deposit remaining dissolves in pure water with a total insoluble residue of from only 0.007 to 0.010 percent. This is significant as showing the easy assimilability of sea salines by animal and plant organisms so far as solubility goes. It is stated also by geochemists that there probably has been no significant variation in the constancy of these sea salines within the epoch of mammals and, perhaps, of total animal and vegetable life on the earth. The slight changes due to salts received from river waters are insignificant. Furthermore, most of the sea salines have probably been the result of rock decomposition in the sea floor and coasts during countless ages, so that an equilibrium has long since been established, which is practically the same for the sea mass as a whole the world over.

"The difference in solubility between sodium chlorid and soldium iodid undoubtedly explains why there is plenty of the former in the earth's deposits and very little of the latter. In the first place, in the drying-up of seas in ages past, sodium chlorid was the first substances deposited, and often the supernatant liquid escaped with its sodium iodid still in solution. A salt stratum or 'rock salt' bed resulted, which was free of iodin. In the second place, such sodium iodid as may have been deposited has been very largely dissolved out for ages through the agency of percolating rain and subsoil waters. Finally, in the third place, pent-up sea brines or supernatant salt solutions, of both surface and subterranean types, have been subjected so long to similar land-water perfusions as to lose practically all of their more soluble constituents. Thus, higher surface altitudes are freest from iodin, while mineral springs which represent drainings from higher altitudes show it, as among the last places of its occurrence.

"This is the explanation given for the absence of iodids and other soluble salts in the great natural salt deposits of the Alps, at Stassfurt, and elsewhere throughout the world, while it accounts for the richness in iodin of some of the world's most famous springs.

"The practical significance of this can be stated in one short sentence: The land surface and, indeed, salt (sodium chlorid) deposits and inland salt brines cannot be depended on for iodin; that which was once present has been virtually leached out and all washed into the sea, or, at least, into lower-lying plains or deeper earthly strata. Naturally, this condition is progressive. It accounts for the tendency in wild animals to favor certain salt springs or 'licks,' and to quit them for others without apparent cause. Kalkus reports that 'deer lick' soils showed an iodin content of 0.032 percent whereas soils from a goitrous district showed only 0.0015 and 0.00161 percent. Civilisation augments the depletion process, for, as long pointed out by soil economists, plants remove salts from the soil for the use of animals whose wastes we cause to be deposited in 'pockets' or in drainage systems which lead to the sea, and not back to the soil.

"The relative infrequency of goiter along sea coasts and its mild type when present is mentioned in most textbooks. It is especially brought out in 'Defects Found in Drafted Men,' in which the ratio stands as 1.02 to 17.55 when sea-coast dwellers are compared to dwellers in mountain regions. The cause appears to be associated in some way with the iodin factor.

"Thus Hunter and Simpson found the amount of iodin in the thyroids of sheep pastured at the seacoast to be twice that of those pastured inland. McCarrison gives the average weight of adult thyroids as from thirty-six to fifty grams inland and from twenty to thirty grams at the seacoast.

THE IODIN THEORY

"The iodin theory would appear to explain these seacoast phenomena in several ways: (1) because sea air contains iodin. It is found in the air residue collected for analysis, which consists of various organisms. (2) All sea animals, sea plants and, therefore, sea foods contain iodin, and such foods are naturally more ingested by residents along the seacoast than those inland. (3) Up to the last half century or so, most of the dietary salt used by goiter-free peoples has been derived from sea water, or from iodin containing salt springs (wild animals sought salt 'licks') and used more or less in crude form or at least without great attention to purification, so that traces of iodin compounds have remained within it, whereas today practically all the salt purchasable is derived from deep-lying inland deposits or brines, which are naturally, or by manufacture, iodin-free.

"Gaylord and Marsh found that the waters used to supply fish hatcheries throughout the country were iodin and bromin free, and that land-locked salmon and those in hatcheries developed endemic goiter and thyroid carcinoma (cancer) readily; but that 'no marine species have been found in the sea with thyroid enlargements;' 'an immunity resides in these marine species,' they enjoy 'a protection which the sea affords;' and, from their investigations, 'it is evident that marine species may develop thyroid carcinoma while resident in fresh waters.' Unfortunately, published information on the diseases of marine animals in general, at least covering the afflictions of the thyroid, is very scarce.

INLAND SALT SOURCES

"According to the United States Geological Survey Report for 1919, there were 102 plants in fifteen States and Territories engaged in the salt industry in 1919. Of these plants, all are inland, with the exception of those along the California coast, where sea water is the source of supply. The inland industry has a great advantage because of the much greater sodium chlorid content of rock salt beds and natural brines. The total production was 6,882,902 short tons. Michigan led with 2,492,378 tons; New York followed with 1,947,839; Ohio was third with 991,730, the other States following in descending order: Kansas, California, Louisiana, Virginia. The per capita consumption was 116 pounds (256 kilo-grams) per year. Imports equaled 0.9 percent of the total, coming chiefly from Spain and the British West Indies.

"The inland salt sources are usually found to be devoid of iodin (and usually of bromin). As a general rule, rock salt deposits and, therefore, the artificial brines made from them, contain a minimum of iodin, if any (Eastern Michigan, Northern Ohio, New York State, Kansas and Louisiana). Natural brines are more likely to contain iodin and especially bromin (Southeastern Ohio at Pomeroy, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Western Michigan). Yet the Pomeroy brines contain but 0.004 gram per liter of iodin, or less than one-half that of sea water. Salt lakes (Great Salt Lake and the Dead Sea) contain no iodin.

"The first step in the preparation of salt is the evaporation of the brine from which sodium chlorid precipitates and then crystallises. The mother liquor is subjected to further similar treatments (sulphates and carbonates of calcium, if present, precede the sodium chlorid in crystallising out) until the profitably recoverable salt is all obtained. The finished product averages 96 percent sodium chlorid, 3 percent moisture, and the balance principally magnesium chlorid. The remaining liquor or 'bittern' is led away, usually to be discarded, but occasionally used for the purpose of obtaining its by-products, as listed above.

"When we come to investigate the preparation of salt from the sea water, which is now made on a commercial scale only in California, we find that the same process of evaporation frees it from the bittern, which carries away with it all of the iodin and various other elements, ingredients and compounds naturally contained in sea water. Hence, it would appear (1) that land animals, including man, have no dependable source of iodin in the salt derived from inland sources, which produce about 96 percent of our total salt supply, and (2), irrespective of whether it is derived from inland sources or from sea water, salt is not at present a source of iodin, because, as Sloan points out, of the preparation processes through which it passes.

THE CONCLUSIONS

"This brings us to but one logical conclusion: If land animals, including man, must have iodin as a necessary content of their food intake, its one reliable natural source is sea water, which, however, must be handled and provided in a manner to retain the iodin, and this probably in its organic form.

"This raises an important question: Should not total sea salts or, indeed, plain sea water, be used as the proper and complete condiment for man and land animals? It must be remembered that it contains not only the two discussed essentials, sodium chlorid and sodium iodid, but also many other physiologically important salts and salines. It is not poisonous. It can be filtered free of foreign matter, even bacteria. Plants and animals, both sea and land forms, show a selective action for such elements as they need for their economic process.

"There is a dearth of information in textbooks and reference works concerning the direct ingestion of sea water as a feature of thalassotherapy (see water therapy) but its subcutaneous injection is said to far excel physiologic sodium chlorid (salt) solution for the same conditions and indications for which the latter is used. The sea water salts, though they exist, with the exception of sodium chlorid and magnesium chlorid, in relatively small amounts, are found to be the identical salts and salines found in fluids of the animal body. While it is true that most of the sea water elements are also widely distributed in the balance of nature and found in our usual foods, the great solubility of the combinations in which they exist in sea water would appear to warrant giving them, in toto, serious consideration in the dietary of man and domestic animals.

"In addition to the reported inhibiting influence of sea water on goiter, may not some of the rarer elements present, if not iodin itself, play an important part in the prevention of some other human afflictions of little understood etiology? May not the absence of bromin from our usual food intake play an important part in the occurrence of various excitomotor conditions?

"It is sufficient to say that while the character of dietary salt is apparently all important to man and domestic animals, it is hardly a major phase of the salt 'manufacturing' industry, as vast quantities of salt are used for other purposes—curing meats, refrigeration, soda manufacture and chemicals."

Soviet Plans To Legalise Gold

(Rosta News Agency)

Moscow, March 1.—A conference recently took place under the chairmanship of Mr. Sokolnikoff, the Acting Commissar of Finance, for the discussion of questions relating to money circulation. In his speech Mr. Sokolnikoff stated that the main problem is to legalise private possession of gold, that is, to abolish the law obliging every person to turn over all gold and valuables such as gems to the Government.

Accounts in gold must be opened in the State Bank and permission should be given for the remittance of Soviet money by mail in foreign countries. Mr. Sokolnikoff also suggested that the exchange rate of Soviet rouble be fixed in foreign money-markets.

These points were discussed and the People's Commissariat of Finance duly approved the new banking regulations governing the deposit of gold and foreign specie in the State Bank. All deposits can be withdrawn on owners' demand. Interest will be paid in Soviet currency.

13 Girls Burned To Death In England

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 7.—Thirteen girls died, and eleven were seriously injured through an explosion of cartridges in a factory at Tipton, Staffordshire.

The victims were trapped in a blazing room and were denuded of their clothing by the force of the explosion. Some, who escaped into a yard with burning skin hanging from them, were sent to the hospital, wrapped in sacks.

Slave Issues In Hongkong To Wait

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 7.—In the House of Commons, replying to questions in regard to the Muitsai system at Hongkong, Mr. Winston Churchill pointed out that the hands of the Governor of Hongkong had been exceptionally full, owing to the grave situation in connection with the strike, while the Secretary for Chinese affairs had been working day and night.

The Governor had promised an answer to Mr. Churchill's telegraphic enquiries at the earliest possible date, therefore Mr. Churchill preferred to defer his statement.

Hoover Blames Russian Railways For Relief Failure

(China Press Service)

Washington, March 7.—Replying to his critics, Secretary Hoover made the statement that the number of persons who will starve in Russian famine districts is almost wholly dependent upon the Russian railroads.

He said that in the last thirty days 100,000 tons of seed and wheat and foodstuffs have been delivered to seven Baltic and Black Sea ports, of which only 25,000 tons have been moved by the demoralised railroads.

Washington, March 7.—Some of the first reports of the relief work among the starving Russians have reached home. From the time the first sack was unloaded bringing American food to their stricken country, the news spread rapidly through the famine district. The stricken people gathered from all directions.

Two thousand teams will distribute corn. The entire work is being rushed before the arrival of disagreeable wather and impassible roads accompanying the spring thaw.

Johannesburg Now An Armed Camp

Johannesburg, March 7.—The center of the city is an amazing spectacle. The streets and market square are constantly filled with moving squadrons of police, carrying rifles, and with commandoes of the strikers bearing red flags and banners, and armed with formidable bludgeons.

The builders are fairly unanimous in favor of a strike.

Commandoes have started intimidation by ordering the large stores to close, but it is believed that the police will be able to afford complete protection.
